Rose Hill Rd. Two-story; gable roof, brick ends, weatherboarded front and rear, end chimneys, projecting. One-story wings with lofts above, all brick, as are connections. All brick light color, laid in Flemish bond. The roof gables are under 45° with pronounced flare at eaves. The interior has fine woodwork but no paneling. The downstairs rooms have plain dados with moulded caps and bases. The mantels are about 5'6" high and have pilasters or engaged columns under elaborate cornices. The stair is inconspicuous. In the dairy house to the northeast of the house there is a vertically sheathed door, with battens (perhaps modern) and cleats laid on the face to form two tiers of equal pairs of panels, the sinkages being filled in with diagonal boarding, affixed with vertical rows of hand-wrought nails.
